'Soup Party' Menu Wins Award for Local Matron

Complete details of Mrs. W. E. Walton's unique "Soup Party" sent to the Woman's Day, monthly publication of the A. & P. Company, won her a prize and was published in a recent issue of that magazine. Mrs. Walton lives at 1416 Acacia st.

"I gave a 'Soup Party' on two successive evenings to groups of 12, reducing the expense by purchasing larger quantities of food. One of my co-workers who was clever at rhyming, worked up invitations for me, declaring 'Soup's On!'

"My menu was simple:

Italian Minestrone
Tossed Green Salad
Buttered French Bread
Broiled Grapefruit
Tea Coffee

Italian Minestrone
1 1/2 cups dried white beans
4 1/2 quarts water
3/4 pound bacon, chopped
3 cans consommé or beef broth
3 medium onions, chopped
1 1/2 cloves garlic, minced
2 1/2 cups chopped celery stalks and leaves
2 cups diced carrots

3 cups finely shredded cabbage
2 1/2 cups raw peas
2 1/2 cups diced potatoes
3 No. 2 1/2 cans tomatoes, Grade C
1 1/2 cups thin spaghetti, broken
Salt and pepper to taste
Grated cheese

Cover beans with cold water, soak overnight. Drain, place in soup kettle with 4 1/2 quarts water and the bacon; simmer until beans are tender. Add consommé, vegetables, spaghetti and seasonings, and cook for half an hour. Serve in large soup bowls with sprinkling of grated cheese.

"I set card tables with peasant-type cloth, silver and glasses. Guests served themselves to soup in vari-colored pottery plates. I think the fact that they accepted second helpings proved that they enjoyed it. Everyone helped to clear the tables, do dishes, and tidy up, before we settled down to play bridge. I thoroughly enjoyed the evening, and my guests did, too. I estimated the entire cost of the food to be about 20 cents per person," Mrs. Walton reported.

Woman's Role in Nat'l Defense is Varied One

Should women as well as men be conscripted for defense work? The question is never heard unaccompanied by a full complement of suppressed tittering. For here, where no bombs actually are falling and no enemies actually are on the march in regimental formation, the thought of conscription for ladies appears just a trifle far-fetched.

Nevertheless, there is nothing very abstract about the drafting about sending a million sons and brothers from every community in the land off to learn to be soldiers. There is nothing at all ephemeral about raising billions in new taxes to build planes, guns and ships, to train men, to outfit and accoutre our armament-ed battle forces, to prepare this country for all eventualities.

To a casual observer, it would appear that if defense is necessary at all it is, necessary to some extent in all departments, including the Women's Department.

What can women do besides roll bandages? Well, chiefly on their own initiative and with very little solicitation by defense chiefs, they're doing a good deal more than that already. They're doing hostess work at the cantonments; building the morale of the young draftees by devising civilian-army social activities; learning to be mechanics, ambulance drivers and pilots; mastering first aid work and other necessary wartime jobs. All on a volunteer basis.

But in the Men's Department a volunteer army was deemed inadequate and a million soldiers were drafted. If a defense need is admitted at all, why stop at half measures?

Why shouldn't women of proper age, whose health will permit and who can probably spare the time from home duties, jobs or social activities, be drafted, too, for an hour or so every day, to report at local meeting places and learn some of the gentler arts of warfare?

With modern war what it is, evacuation procedure is important to know. Care of children and the aged is important, too. Mass feeding and housing problems could well be studied. First aid and nursing, of course. Moral maintenance of uprooted people en masse, and entertainment projects are of more value than they appear to the naked eye of a people at peace.

There are hundreds of things the women of a country set up for defense should know in order to do their bit if called on. Things that can't be learned overnight — as many European countries can testify.

War, we hope and pray, will not come, ever. But if we must prepare for it, let our preparation be complete and thorough.

HOSTELING IS POPULARIZED

"Hosteling" an inexpensive way of staying in the country is becoming more popular in the United States, said Miss Lenore Smith, U.S.C. instructor in the physical education department, in a talk to the National Business and Professional Women of Torrance Monday night.

Several of these loops have been established on the west coast, in Oregon, Washington and Southern California. Lodgings at cheap rates are provided by the association.
